

Jim Bridger built this fort. It was a ramshackle place and a big disappointment to the travelers. When wagon's came, he would give them advice, repairs and animals. The U.S. government later came and took it over for a military base.