

Alcove Spring

Alcove Spring was a lovely woody place on the east side of the Big Blue River. The fresh water, grass and wood made this a very popular campsite for the emigrants. The spring flowed over a 10 foot waterfall and in springtime the area was covered with wild flowers.